THE LEGISLATURE

On Thursday the Hon. E. Preston, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, presented a report on the contested election at Waialeale. The report gives evidence of careful consideration and exhaustive examination, which we could wish other Committees would bestow upon all matters committed to them. The election of Mr. Nakama was clearly illegal, while at the same time endorsing the report. It has or will come to this, that all a candidate has to do to secure a seat is to obtain a majority of ballots, (without a thought as to the manner of obtaining them,) present his certificate, take his seat, defy the law, and be upheld by his colleagues. In this particular case the results may not prove directly harmful, but indirectly the example afforded by the Assembly must be pernicious.

On Friday the Hon. G. Rhodes, President of the Assembly, was pleased to introduce a resolution of want of confidence in the Ministry, because the Minister of Foreign Relations had said that it was not his intention to put the treaty of reciprocity with the United States before the Assembly for its approval in accordance with the provisions of Article 29 of the Constitution. The resolution (which is published with Saturday's proceedings,) was lost by a decisive majority. The debate on the resolution was not interesting, one or two hits were made by the introducer of the resolution, but not of sufficient force to make more than a transient effect. It would perhaps be well for the Assembly if the President and the Minister of Foreign Affairs could forget the late memorial.

On Saturday the vote on the resolution of the day before was reconsidered, and the whole matter made the order of the day for Monday, upon which day the Assembly in Committee of the whole listened to a lengthy debate pro and con without coming to a conclusion. The most of the time was consumed by the Minister of Foreign Relations and the Hon. S. N. Castle, with a few remarks by the Hon. G. Rhodes.

In the above debate His Ex. the Minister of Foreign Affairs replied to the charges brought against the King's Government, for the manner in which the treaty had been negotiated, by giving a full history of the negotiation, and the advantages which this measure promises to give to these islands. We regret that our space will not permit its publication in full this week, but it will appear in our next issue.

Another Bill for the increase of the people is before the Assembly, by the terms of which the Minister of the Interior is to prepare a code of laws for the better regulation of families. In a few remarks upon the Bill the Hon. S. N. Castle said: That to his mind the Bible contained the best code for the government and control of families; that this book could be found in every family, but families did not seem to be governed by its provisions, and that he was convinced that if the people would not obey the code of the Almighty, they would not be likely to respect one promulgated by the Minister of the Interior. In his opinion this race could not increase until they put away their hypocrisy. Nearly every native had, upon coming to man's estate, taken upon him the vows of the church, and then fallen back to his filth; that this was perjury, and the Almighty would punish the race for this offence. The honorable nobleman's remarks were very truthful, but we fear that they will not result in the desired reformation.

Yesterday, Hon. S. N. Castle moved a resolution that the speeches of the Hon. J. M. Smith and His Ex. the Minister of Foreign Affairs in favor of the Treaty be printed for distribution among the people. Opposition being made the resolution was withdrawn.

Hon. Mr. Piliipo moved that Wm. Ragsdale and Hon. Peter Y. Kaeo be brought before this Assembly, the one to present the complaints of the lepers, the other to answer for his administration.

Pacific Cables.

Now that the Treaty of Reciprocity is a fact, a telegraphic cable looms up as our next great commercial necessity. It is thought by many that telegraphic communication with the great world would be of greater real benefit to us than the Treaty can possibly be. But however this may be, its benefits would be great and immediate. The commerce of this ocean is rapidly increasing, and is destined, with the development of the Anglo-Saxon empire to the south and east of us, and the growth of the Asiatic trade, to assume proportions of vast magnitude in the course of the next few decades. From the central position which we occupy, Hawaii must be the hub of the commercial wheel of the Pacific Ocean. Let us once have cables radiating east and west, and north and south, and the myriads of ships laden with their rich freights, which will be sailing in every direction will touch here to report themselves, or for orders, and Midas-like, the touch will result in gold for Hawaii.

Our merchants, who, under the epoch of slow communication by letter, have thought themselves rich when their accumulations have amounted to a few hundred thousand dollars, will then be able, like the spider in the middle of his web, to watch and direct the operations of trade at every point in the Pacific, and then will be inaugurated the era of Hawaiian millionaires.

Our neighbors in Australia and New Zealand, not content with the one cable which now connects them with India and Europe, are discussing the feasibility of a Pacific cable, and they express a willingness to undertake the enterprise, if communities on this side will bear a proportion of the expense. The company which was formed some time since in the United States seems to be in a state of inaction at present, waiting for assistance from Congress, and we do not hear that there is any probability that such assistance may be expected very soon; still the advocates of the scheme are undoubtedly doing what they can, and their plans may be more matured than we think.

At the last session of our Legislature, an act was passed for the encouragement and aid of any company or companies, which might desire to lay a telegraphic cable between this, and any foreign country, by granting land and timber, and making all possible concessions in the way of remitting duties on goods, wares and merchandise, required for the use of such a company, and exempting ships employed in their service from all port charges except pilotage. We do not know as anything more can be expected of this government. We certainly should not advocate the granting of a monopoly to any one company for a term of years. But private capitalists here, might assist by taking stock in the enterprise.

GLORIOUS NEWS!

Passage of the Reciprocity Treaty!

Arrival of the Mary Belle Roberts!

Honolulu, May 26, 1878.
By the arrival of the above vessel, we have to announce the welcome news that the Hawaiian Reciprocity Treaty passed the House of Representatives on the 28th of May by a vote of 116 to 101. The vote was announced by the following telegram:—

Washington, May 5, 1878.
The Hawaiian Treaty passed this day 12 majority. A glorious victory!
J. R. LUTHER, M. C.

The following is from the Bulletin:
The House at 3 1/2 P. M. passed the bill to carry the Hawaiian Treaty into effect, by a vote of 116 against 101. The passage by the Senate is a foregone conclusion, and the Pacific Coast members were present, and voted for the bill.

The following is from the Advertiser:
The House gave its sanction to the Hawaiian Treaty, on Thursday, May 28th.

The House returned consideration of the bill to carry into effect the Hawaiian Treaty, Thomas, of Maryland, addressed the House relative to the power of the House to refuse to sanction a treaty made by the President and Senate, arguing that it had the power. It was perfectly correct for the House to refuse its sanction to a treaty.

Teacher, of Virginia, followed in the same line of argument. Under the Constitution, the House was a part of the treaty-making power, and could exercise its constitutional authority to refuse legislation to carry out such treaties as it did not approve of. He argued that the treaty was not a treaty, but a business transaction. It was a positive loss to the revenue, with no compensating advantage.

When Tucker's time expired, Wood demanded the previous question, which was agreed to. He yielded to Tucker to conclude his speech.
Banks responded to Tucker, and argued it was the duty of the House to carry out the treaty. The question of revenue was not in point. It was a question of national defense. The House of Representatives, written Arkansas, through its members, had passed a resolution to carry out the treaty. The House of Representatives, written Arkansas, through its members, had passed a resolution to carry out the treaty.

The most important item of the week in commercial circles is the final confirmation of the Hawaiian Reciprocity Treaty. The vote was 116 to 101. All the Pacific Coast members were present and voted for the bill. The ratification of this treaty by Congress is a landmark in our history, and will be a great benefit to the islands.

The same journal adds:
The long-delayed Reciprocity Treaty between the Hawaiian Islands and the United States may now be considered as a fact accomplished, having received the endorsement of the House by a vote of 116 to 101. That the Senate will sanction it is a foregone conclusion. The pros and cons of this subject have been so frequently and exhaustively treated by the press and in Congress, that little more remains to be said. The assurance that it is a treaty, and that it will be a great benefit to the islands, is a fact which will be a great benefit to the islands.

The New York Tribune, and the Hawaiian Treasury.
The Tribune editorially says: The passage of the Hawaiian Treaty in the House yesterday was a surprise to its opponents. Its passage was made possible by the vote of many members most interested. The question about the treaty is whether our own people are a few planters in the Sandwich Islands, who must be taken into consideration, or whether it is a room for wide differences of public opinion.

The Hawaiian Treasury.
The bill for the increase of the people and means Committee, in February last, after the passage of the Hawaiian Treaty, finally passed the House by a small majority. It was reported that the bill was passed by a vote of 116 to 101. The bill was reported that the bill was passed by a vote of 116 to 101.

near future, and sometimes events have very rapidly a consummation. The effect of the treaty will be to make Hawaii an outlying dependency of the United States, not by any immediate act of annexation, but by taking her into commercial fellowship, by fostering and stimulating by stimulating enterprise. Surely all this cannot be fruitful of any other but good results. Hawaiian interests have been largely developed by American capital and industry. The treaty, on the commercial side, means that new capital and new enterprise will be brought to the development of these resources—that is, that American interests will be largely increased in that quarter.
